The United States Commission on Civil Rights

The United States Commission on Civil Rights, first created by the Civil Rights Act of 1957, and reestablished by the United States Commission on Civil Rights Act of 1983, is an independent, bipartisan agency of the Federal Government. By the terms of the 1983 act, the Commission is charged with the following duties pertaining to discrimination or denials of the equal protection of the laws based on race, color, religion, sex, age, handicap, or national origin, or in the administration of justice: investigation of individual discriminatory denials of the right to vote; study of legal developments with respect to discrimination or denials of the equal protection of the law; appraisal of the laws and policies of the United States with respect to discrimination or denials of equal protection of the law; maintenance of a national clearinghouse for information respecting discrimination or denials of equal protection of the law; and investigation of patterns or practices of fraud or discrimination in the conduct of Federal elections. The Commission is also required to submit reports to the President and the Congress at such times as the Commission, the Congress, or the President shall deem desirable.

The State Advisory Committees

An Advisory Committee to the United States Commission on Civil Rights has been established in each of the 50 States and the District of Columbia pursuant to section 105(c) of the Civil Rights Act of 1957 and section 6(c) of the United States Commission on Civil Rights Act of 1983. The Advisory Committees are made up of responsible persons who serve without compensation. Their functions under their mandate from the Commission are to: advise the Commission of all relevant information concerning their respective States on matters within the jurisdiction of the Commission; advise the Commission on matters of mutual concern in the preparation of reports of the Commission to the President and the Congress; receive reports, suggestions, and recommendations from individuals, public and private organizations, and public officials upon matters pertinent to inquiries conducted by the State Advisory Committee; initiate and forward advice and recommendations to the Commission upon matters in which the Commission shall request the assistance of the State Advisory Committee; and attend, as observers, any open hearing or conference that the Commission may hold within the State.

The Indiana Advisory Committee submits this report, The Increase of Hate Crime in Indiana, as part of its responsibility to advise the Commission on civil rights issues within the State.

The Advisory Committee and staff of the Midwestern Regional Office held a community forum on August 8, 1991, in Indianapolis, Indiana, to obtain various perspectives and facts on hate crime in Indiana. Those invited to participate included government officials, elected leaders, representatives of community organizations, law enforcement agencies, and other knowledgeable citizens in the community.

The Committee believes that there is a real problem of hate crime in the State and that much of it is unidentified as such by law enforcement agencies. It also observes that today's youth are involved in much of the hate crime and are unaware of the history of the civil rights struggle in this country. Finally, it sees those running for office who use politics of resentment and divisiveness exacerbating racial polarization in this society.

Although the report does not reflect an exhaustive analysis of the subject, the Committee hopes the Commission will find it of value in its monitoring of racial, ethnic, and religious tensions nationwide. Please note that Asian and Hispanic organizations throughout the State, including those in Indianapolis, Fort Wayne, and the East Chicago-Gary region, were contacted to participate in the forum but declined citing a lack of hate crimes against their community.

Definitions of Hate Crime

Under the authority of section 534 of title 28, United States Code, the Attorney General shall acquire data, for the calendar year 1990 and each of the succeeding four calendar years, about crimes that manifest evidence of prejudice based on race, religion, sexual orientation, or ethnicity, including where appropriate the crimes of murder, non-negligent manslaughter, forcible rape, aggravated assault, simple assault, intimidation, arson; and destruction, damage or vandalism of property.

Hate Crimes Statistics Act, Pub. L. No. 101-275
28 U.S.C. §534 note (West Supp. 1991)

... convictions under IC 35-42, IC 35-43-1, IC 35-43-2 and IC 35-45-2 in the county served by the prosecuting attorney in which the court has found that malice aforethought toward a:
(1) person based on the person's membership in or association with a group or class of persons; or
(2) group or class of persons;
is evident in the commission of the crime.

Proposed Indiana House Bill No. 1842 (1991), amending IC 5-2-5-14, §14(a).

A criminal offense committed against a person or property which is motivated, in whole or in part, by the offender's bias against a race, religion, ethnic/national origin group, or sexual orientation group.

Introduction

In July 1988 the United States Commission on Civil Rights (USCCR) passed a resolution encouraging its State Advisory Committees to review the subject of bias-related violence. The Commission itself had reviewed the issue and in 1990 published Intimidation and Violence, Racial and Religious Bigotry in America concluding:

[T]he phenomenon of racial and religious violence and harassment is a continuing threat to the maintenance of a peaceful, democratic, and pluralistic society. Bigotry-bred violence and intimidation are manifestations of racism, anti-Semitism, and other forms of religious bigotry that still survive even after the years of effort spent on their eradication.

The Indiana Advisory Committee to the USCCR recognized that hate crime was a serious problem in the State. The nature and extent of hate crime in Indiana was researched, and a community forum held on the topic in Indianapolis, Indiana, on August 8, 1991.

Recent Hate Crime Activity

In recent years there have been documented incidents of hate crime throughout Indiana. In Indianapolis, a white man, distraught because blacks were visiting at a neighbor's house, fired shots into the home wounding an infant and her babysitter.¹ In another Indianapolis incident, a black man who had moved into a white neighborhood was attacked by a group of white men who shouted racial slurs and vandalized his car.²

A racially mixed couple living in Hammond had their car vandalized and a note was left that threatened the lives of the family members.³ There were two cross burnings in the yards of black families in Marion during the first half of 1991.⁴

In Columbus a cross was burned in the yard of a black family that had moved into a white neighborhood. Another black family that moved into a white neighborhood had their home smoke-bombed.⁵ In Evansville a white man ran over a black man who was dating his sister. The assailant's sister was quoted as saying, "I'm not supposed to hang around blacks. It's been a problem in our family for a long time. . . ."⁶

On October 21, 1991, the Indianapolis Police Department received a report that a car had the antenna broken off and the windshield wipers bent; the word "queer" was written into the car dirt several times. Two days later, the passenger tires were flattened and the word "homo" was scratched into the side panel.⁷

Schools and universities also experienced hate crimes in recent years. In Indianapolis, Warren High School was closed for 2 days in 1990 following a racial disturbance between black and white students. At Rogers High School in Michigan City black students attacked white students allegedly as a result of racial slurs written on mirrors in bathrooms.⁸

At DePauw University a fraternity held a ghetto party using decorations with racist graffiti about blacks.⁹ In an incident at Indiana State University, a black student was assaulted and beaten in his room by white students.¹⁰ At Purdue University a cross was burned in front of the Black Cultural Center and a racial slur was scratched on the door of a black counselor.¹¹

Just days before the community forum, a violent hate crime erupted just blocks from the site. A shelter for the homeless was attacked by neighboring whites because some of the clientele at the shelter were black. Patsy McCormick, director of the shelter, recounted the incident to the Committee:

Two weeks ago today I was sitting in my office and I thought I heard fireworks, and I thought that was strange, kind of out of season for it. I heard somebody screaming, so I looked out of my office window and the guy next door was shooting directly at our building and he was aiming at the front porch where the guys (from the shelter) were sitting. . . . When I got to the door everybody was just shoving each other in, trying to get in, and so I went down the street and I said, "What's wrong?" . . . Of course that guy took off.

And there were six people sitting in their yard two doors down, sitting there, and I said, "What is wrong?" and they said "We're not having niggers in our neighborhood, and if you house them you're leaving too." I said, "These are homeless veterans," and they said, "We don't care. They're not staying in this neighborhood." . . . Then the following Sunday night they burned a cross in our front yard.¹²

¹² Testimony before the Indiana Advisory Committee to the USCCR, community forum, Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 8, 1991, transcript, pp. 250-51.

The Forum

The Committee brought together 20 participants with different perspectives to share their knowledge, views, and opinions on the extent and nature of hate crime in Indiana. These participants included:

- (1) government officials,
- (2) community organizations,
- (3) the gay and lesbian community,

- (4) law enforcement officials, and
- (5) members of the public.

Presenters told the Committee about the extent of hate crime in Indiana and whether such activity was increasing. They also described to the Committee their understanding of the nature of such criminal behavior and gave recommendations on how to control and eliminate hate crime.

The Trend of Hate Crime in Indiana

The three government officials who addressed the Committee stated that hate crime is increasing in the State. Yet no specific data on the numbers of hate crimes committed in the State are available. State legislation mandating tracking has been defeated by the Indiana General Assembly, and recordkeeping systems directed by recent Federal legislation are still in the implementation stage by law enforcement agencies.

Dave Arland, executive assistant to Indianapolis Mayor William Hudnut, read a statement from the mayor:

Although it is too early to document percentage increases in local hate crimes because statistics have only been kept for a few months by hate crime category, the concern and attention about several local incidents, from police shootings, gang attacks, and vandalism to cross burnings, indicates that hate crime is definitely on the rise.

... We have compiled a list of more than twenty incidents that could be considered crimes of hate so far this year. . . They include cases of church vandalism, threats based on national origin, harassment of women by men, harassment of homosexuals by heterosexuals, and a number of incidents between blacks and whites based in whole or in part on racial conflict. And those are only the reported complaints and only the complaints by individuals against other individuals.¹

William Crawford, a State representative to the Indiana General Assembly, introduced legislation that would require prosecutors to report hate crime incidents to the State police. In drafting the legislation, he and his staff studied the extent of hate crime in the State. He testified that hate crime is increasing in Indiana:

Although I can not factually verify it, I sincerely believe that incidents of crimes motivated by hatred of a person, a group, or a class of persons, based on their race, creed, color, handicap, sex, or sexual orientation. . . is definitely on the rise.

Karen Freeman Wilson, director of the Indiana Civil Rights Commission (ICRC), also asserted that incidents of hate crime are increasing. To support her position, she gave a partial data set to the Committee:

When you begin to look at hard figures, as we have attempted to do so at the commission in the last few years, we find that in 1989 there were two reported incidents, in 1990 there were four reported incidents of hate crime,² and in 1991 thus far (the first 6 months) there have been six.³

The number of incidents of hate crime collected by the ICRC is shown below.

1989: ■ ■ (2)

1990: ■ ■ ■ ■ (4)

1991: ■ ■ ■ ■ ■ ■ (6) *

* [Includes incidents for only the first 6 months of 1991]

Moreover, Wilson informed the Committee that these small numbers reflect the "phantom" nature of hate crime. There are certain elements and certain aspects of this activity, she said, that make it almost an undetectable activity because it is usually very difficult to specifically identify bias as the motive for the crime.

Phyllis Bartleson, vice president of the Indiana Consortium of State and Local Human Rights Agencies, did not specifically contend that hate crime was increasing in the State but did say it was a serious problem and cited numerous recent examples. She also emphasized to the Committee that hate crime is often not identified as such to law enforcement authorities and that this pattern hid the extent of the problem:

We do have a problem in our State with hate and bias crimes. One of the major problems the agencies agree on in discussing this particular issue. . . is that there is a lack of reporting. That seems to be a major problem.

Various crimes and criminal activities are reported to law enforcement agencies but they are not specifically reported as bias crimes or hate crimes. Maybe they're reported as vandalism by juveniles, aggravated assault, neighborhood dispute, but what we have found is there are very few crimes that are actually labeled as hate or bias crimes. This seems to be a problem.⁴

Spokespersons for several community groups and organizations had different sets of information on the extent and scope of hate crime in Indiana. Arthur Jordan, education committee chairman of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), presented evidence about problems at colleges and universities.

The NAACP monitored hate crimes on college campuses in the State and held hearings on the problem in 1990 at seven different locations. Jordan stated that there had been a surge in hate crime on college campuses in the late eighties but that currently such activity did not seem to be increasing:

There seemed to be a rash of those things happening [hate crime] in '89 and '90, but to date we have not been advised of any other things like that happening, and. . . we hope that our presence on campus. . . at least got the message to someone that things are being looked at very carefully. . . .

. . . I'm not going. . . to say there's been a decrease. . . we just have not been made aware of any increase. . . at this point in time I'm just going to say that things are probably status quo at this point.

Robert Epstein, chairman of the civil rights committee of the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) of Ohio, presented evidence on anti-Semitic activity. His data showed that reported incidents of anti-Semitic activity nationwide increased in 1990, but the number of reported incidents in Indiana for the same period were lower.

[The ADL] does monitor hate crimes both nationally and. . . in the State of Indiana. . . In recent years our agency has witnessed an upsurge in the number of acts of ethnic threats, harassment, and battery. . . During 1990 the number of anti-Semitic incidents. . . in the United States climbed to a record of 1,685 episodes. . . This represents the highest total ever reported since the ADL began collecting this information. . . .

In [Indiana] in 1990 there was a decrease in the number of anti-Semitic incidents reported to our regional headquarters in Columbus. The survey reported a total of 10 incidents reported.⁵

Table 1 depicts the ADL's data on anti-Semitic hate crime for the last 2 years.

Amos Brown, station manager of WTLC, an Indianapolis radio station that is targeted primarily to black listeners, said that hate crime has persisted in central Indiana for two decades, although it is not as open and as explosive as in other communities:

There has been—ever since our radio station has been in existence in Indianapolis some 23 years, there have been reported hate crimes here in our community. While we have not had many cross burnings, while we've not had white neighborhoods in turmoil or in riot when blacks move in. . . we here in the central part of the State have had problems.

They've tended to be under the surface, under the veneer. They've tended to be subtle. They've tended to be isolated. Yet when you look at it cumulatively, they add up.

Testimony was given at the forum that, per capita, members of the homosexual community suffer the highest rate of hate crime. Marla Stevens, co-chair of the Great Lakes Lesbian and Gay Association, told the Committee:

2. Graph depiction is rounded to nearest third (three hundred). Exact number of incidents are in parenthesis at the top of each bar.
3. The first number in column 1 refers to Indiana; the second number refers to the nation.

The most frequent victims on a per capita basis, when comparing the numbers of people group to group, are gays and lesbians in the United States. [They] exceed the per capita incidence of violent crime exhibited against racial minorities, religious minorities, ethnic minorities, and at the elderly and other groups that have been studied to date.

One in 7 men and 1 in 11 women in the gay community report having experienced a violent crime committed against them because of their sexual orientation. This includes being punched, kicked, beaten, raped, shot, and murdered.

The Committee also heard that hate crimes against homosexuals go largely unreported. Part of this is a result of discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation being legal. Victims who come forward risk job discrimination, embarrassment, and other societal retribution. Stephanie Turner remarked:

Fear of exposure is a . . . reason why victims do not always want to report the crime. They don't want any attention given to them. They may consider themselves to be at a risk for losing their job or at a risk for becoming disenfranchised from their family or some other type of situation.¹⁰

Another reason for the low reporting is that police do not often treat it as a bias crime. Turner said that if the police are summoned, they will come and investigate:

However, to report it as a bias crime is something that we need to emphasize, particularly since we have Federal legislation requiring it now. Local police departments and local civil rights advocacy groups do not always see the need or even the opportunities to work together toward this end of reporting the crimes.¹¹

Sam Jones, president of the Indianapolis Urban League, went beyond the specifics of hate crime and addressed overall racial tensions. He asserted that the present condition of race relations was as bad as ever:

In many ways the black-white situation is worse today than in the 1960s. According to the 1988 Committee of Cities Report. . .the polarization between the black and white communities is much more pronounced now than in the 1960s. The conclusion that can be reached, at least from my vantage point, is that we have made very little progress in eliminating race and racism from our daily lives locally and nationally.

The Nature and Extent of Hate Crime in Indiana

Both the nature and the extent of hate crime in the State were addressed by most of the presenters. The Committee received specific information about (1) the perpetrators, (2) the geographic locations of hate crime, and (3) the types of hate crime.

The Perpetrators

Perpetrators of hate crime act both individually and as members of groups. Dave Arland told the Committee that hate groups existed and were active in Indiana:

Indianapolis, and in turn Indiana, both, have street gangs and skinheads. There are local citizens who belong to the Ku Klux Klan or other organizations that sort and judge people by race. . . Indianapolis was home to a group of 40 or so neo-Nazi skinheads in 1990. Indiana membership in the KKK, while dropping, is still a concern.

Phil Hoy, executive director of the Tri-State Food Bank in Evansville, asserted that the Ku Klux Klan is very active in southwestern Indiana.

One of the organizations that is very active in southwestern Indiana is the Klan. . . [WTHR-Channel 13 in Indianapolis] has footage of a secret Klan training center in southwestern Indiana where the leader unashamedly and unabashedly is showing how to create poison darts.

Robert Epstein testified that the ADL routinely monitors hate group activity. In this context he mentioned several specifics about skinheads:

Skinhead related anti-Semitic incidents are down significantly, although skinhead activity remains a major concern.

There is no national leadership of the skinhead movement; there are splinter groups around the country.

The skinheads move around a lot. An Indiana group may not necessarily do its business here, but make it over to Ohio or Texas, and contrarily a Texas group may come up here and meet with an Indiana group.

Karen Freeman-Wilson also mentioned to the Committee that Klan cells did exist in the State and that some hate crime was organized. She stated that there was an active KKK cell in St. Joseph County where they broadcast a television show, "Race and Reason," and also have a toll-free number that individuals can call and get information about neo-Nazi and Klan activities. . . However, in the hate crimes that the ICRC had prosecuted for damages, the perpetrators were groups of teenagers not linked to any specific group or organization.

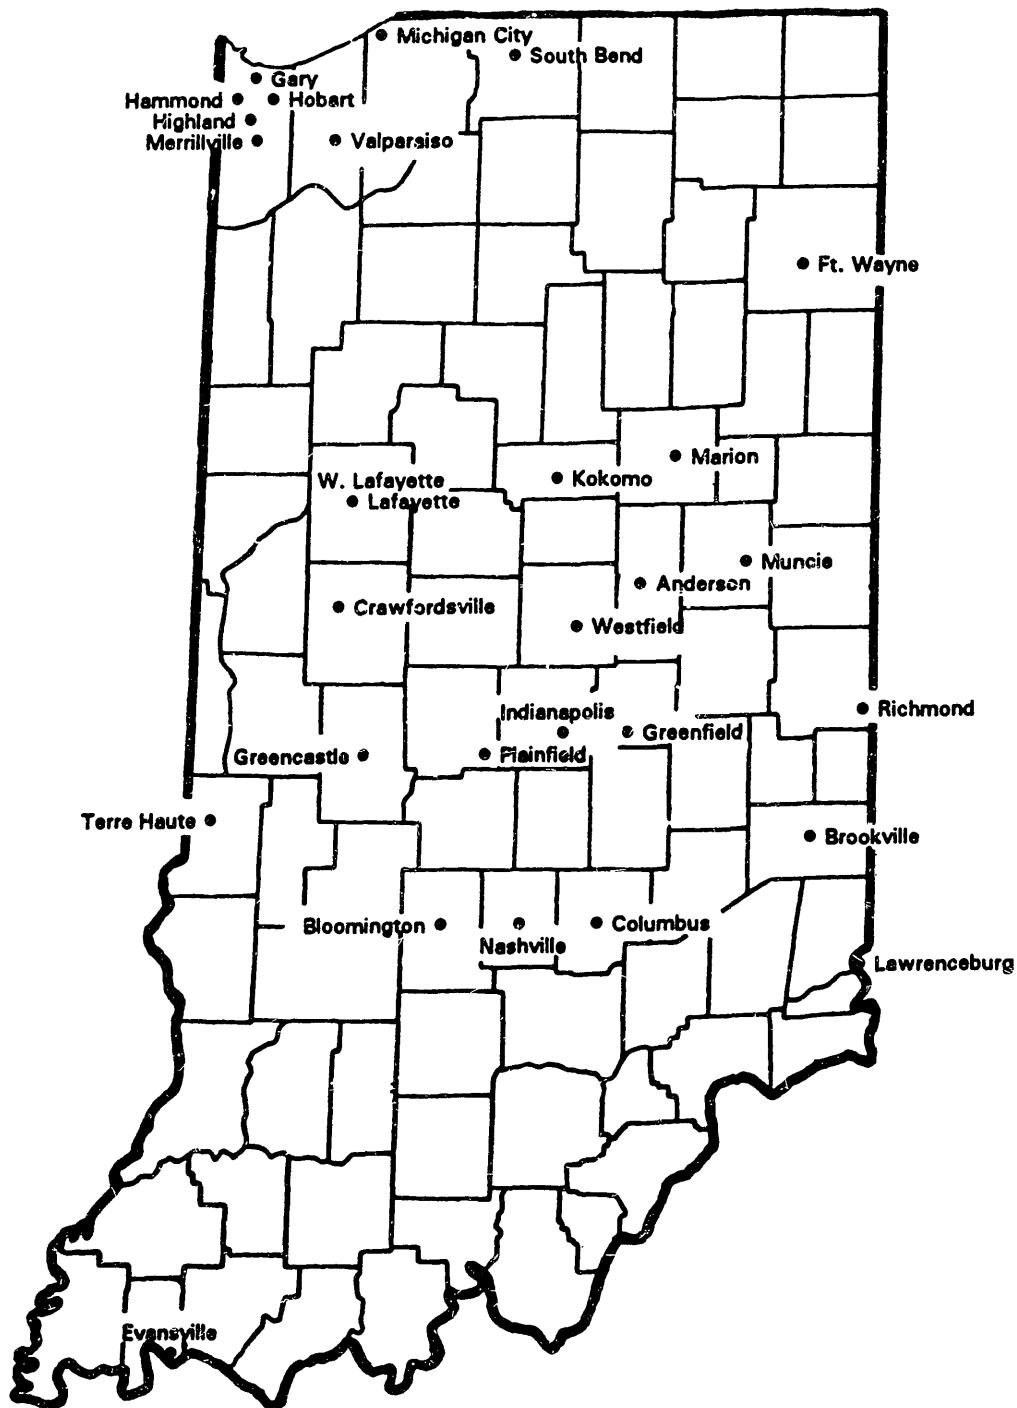

Geographic Areas of Recent Hate Crime Activity

Evidence was given at the forum that hate crime occurred in all parts of the State. In addition, hate crimes occurred in various settings, including residential neighborhoods, public highways, the workplace, high schools, public parks, and college campuses.

Below is a map depicting locations of reported hate crimes in Indiana in 1989, 1990, and 1991.

Locations of Hate Crimes Reported in Indiana in 1989, 1990, and 1991

The Types of Hate Crimes

The types of hate crimes witnessed in Indiana in recent years have ranged from verbal intimidation to serious bodily assault.

Presenters at the forum mentioned the following hate crimes:

- ARSON at synagogues and private homes,
- BOMBINGS of homes, schools, and synagogues,
- SHOOTINGS at groups and at individuals,
- VANDALISM including smoke-bombing, chemicals dumped into swimming pools, and graffiti on cars and homes,
- CROSS BURNINGS in front of shelters and private residences,
- PHYSICAL ASSAULTS by individuals and groups,
- THREATS made to individuals and to families,
- HARASSMENT and INTIMIDATION
- TELEPHONE THREATS of violence and vandalism,
- VEHICLE ASSAULTS, and
- MURDER.

The nature of many hate crimes against the homosexual community is particularly gruesome. Stevens cited congressional testimony supporting her position:

According to a 1980 study by Miller and Humphreys, "intense rage is present in nearly all homicide cases with homosexual victims. The striking feature of most murders in this sample is their gruesome, often vicious, nature. Seldom is a homosexual victim simply shot. He is more aptly to be stabbed a dozen times, mutilated and strangled."

According to Melissa Mertz, coordinator of the Victim of Violent Assault Assistance Program of Bellevue Hospital in New York City, "Attacks against gay men were the most heinous and brutal I have encountered. They frequently involved torture, cutting, mutilation, and beating and showed the absolute intent to rub out the human being because of his sexual preference."⁶

Stevens related the sexual horror that many lesbian women experience:

I did an informal poll among lesbians. . .and fully 60 percent of those women report sexually oriented crimes ranging from threats to rape. Half of the women who have led gay and lesbian organizations in Indiana have been raped in the course of their work, and these rapists routinely mention changing the sexual orientation of the woman. I am one of those survivors.

It was also suggested that hate crime against the homosexual community has a connection with other hate crime. Individuals who commit hate crimes against gays and lesbians are likely to vent their hatred on other minority groups. Attacks on the homosexual community do not occur in a vacuum nor are they isolated from other manifestations of bigotry.

Stevens told the Committee:

The other thing that's real important to recognize is the connectiveness of hate crimes. . . .It's essential that we track gay and lesbian crimes, if for no other reason than the bigots who do them do not discriminate. They do not discriminate against the groups of people that they commit these crimes against. . . .Hate seems to be just hate.

6 Forum Transcript, pp. 224-25.

7 Forum Transcript, page 220. Stephanie Turner related an incident to the Committee about one of those women:

This woman was past president of Justice, Inc. and was at the time very high profile in the media. She was targeted with a series of threatening letters. One night as she was leaving her place of work she was forced back into the building and held at gunpoint for three hours, raped repeatedly, and the message of the attacker was, "You will leave here heterosexual or you will die." (See Forum Transcript, pages 190-91.)

Causes and Contributing Circumstances

No clear consensus of why hate crime exists emerged from the forum. Different causes, different theories and different contributing circumstances were offered. Witnesses volunteered nine principal reasons for hate crime. They included:

- (1) an erosion of civic responsibility,
- (2) a lack of political and private leadership,
- (3) inadequate statutes and deterrents,
- (4) societal racism and discrimination,
- (5) a diminishing commitment by the churches,
- (6) failure to take hate crime seriously,
- (7) changing demographics,
- (8) a loss of a sense of civil rights history, and
- (9) poverty.

An Erosion of Civic Responsibility

Mayor Hudnut's statement stressed the erosion of civic responsibility as a factor in the increase of hate crime. Individuals have lost a sense of community and that translates into less tolerance and less concern for the rights and freedoms of others:

One must wonder if this rise in this type of crime is linked to other trends. . . Charitable giving is dropping in some areas. Voter turnout [has] slipped. . . Everyone notices a decline in common courtesy. . . Students admit cheating on exams is up. Murder rates are climbing as is crime in general.

. . . Professor Robert Johnston of Earlham College speaking on the decline of civic virtue put it this way, "If we as a people are so devoted to private gain and personal gratification that we fail to accept an obligation to the public good and lose our capacity for equality, decency, and fair play, then our public life will be impoverished."

The concern for the individual, what's best for me instead of what's best for all, triggers enrollment in organizations that thrive on prejudice. . .¹

Lack of Political and Private Leadership

William Crawford was unequivocal in his view that a lack of leadership creates the climate for hate crime. He placed this blame not only on elected officials, but also on private leadership and the civil rights and religious organizations, claiming that public leadership only reflects the moral imperatives that the private citizenry demands:

[I] view [hate crime] as a direct result of the lack of strong and unambiguous leadership on the part of elected officials and private sector leadership. Legislators must come to understand that there is a definite need to measure hate by the numbers and enact legislation mandating the reporting of hate crimes.²

. . . Civil rights and religious organizations have also failed to adequately address this problem. . . For whatever reason we do not collectively and cooperatively raise this issue to the level of attention and scrutiny it deserves. This inaction on our part directly contributes to the high degree of neglect on the part of public and private officials.³

Karen Freeman-Wilson explained that inadequate statutes and deterrents perpetuated hate crime. Without a clear definition and a real punitive deterrent, hate crime not only continues to be an ambiguous act within the community, but a riskless venture as well:

There are inadequate criminal and civil statutes. . . The reality is that you are dealing with people who have little or no records and who will ultimately get probation, and so there is really no deterrent for them not to behave in that unsocial way. And so I really believe from the experience that we've observed that the local laws, the State laws, are very inadequate, not only for reporting,⁴ but for addressing the real issue of hate crime.

Societal Racism

Sam Jones said that hate crime is a symptom of the larger societal problem of racism. And racism continues to exist because it is still part of the daily fabric of American life:

The problem of racism persists because we have not addressed it for what it really is, a social disease.

Racial hatred, or racism if you want to call it that, promotes an adversarial attitude of, quote, us and them, end of quote, mentality, that is often acted out on the job, in school, law enforcement, on the playground, and even in church.

A Diminishing Commitment by the Churches

Phil Hoy repeated Crawford's theme that a lack of leadership is a cause of hate crime. He accused the national leadership of losing its commitment to civil rights. But he also focused blame on the churches and the civil rights organizations:

As a clergyman I have to confess that the commitment of the churches is much less today than it was prior to 1980, and as I speak with young seminarians, and I've had the privilege of doing that, I'm not seeing the kind of commitment to civil rights for a number of groups that were present in my graduate school days and in the 20 plus years following my graduation.

Failure To Take Hate Crime Seriously

Phil Hoy added another factor contributing to the problem. He charged that police attitudes that blamed the victim and dismissed the seriousness of the crime exacerbated hate crime activity:

[The] victims of abuse and hate crimes are more likely to be blamed than the perpetrators of the crime. . . .

If you call [the police] from certain sections of the city, the caller will be grilled as to their race. . . any number of personal questions, while their lives are being threatened.⁹

Changing Demographics

Amos Brown cited changing demographics for the rise in hate crime in Indiana. Historically Indiana had been relatively segregated. That pattern, however, has been breaking down in recent years. Beginning in the late seventies and early eighties, black migration patterns changed. That movement is particularly threatening to some whites in low-income neighborhoods and some members of those communities react violently to the black immigrants:

One reason that hate crimes may be on the rise in this State is that blacks are moving towards the center of Indiana. . . . The 1990 census indicates that blacks are moving out of Lake County, out of the smaller cities of the State, and coming here to Indianapolis.

Newly released census data for the city show huge increases in black population during the 1980s. . . . This is partly a result of strong migration, immigration to Indianapolis from the rest of the state or from other areas of the country.

In the past 30 years the Indianapolis black community, which used to be in a tightly segregated, small geographic area, has broken out and spread in all directions of Marion County, especially to the northeast, north, and northwest. Blacks [are] moving. . . into lower income neighborhoods; and usually when lower income blacks move into lower income white neighborhoods, trouble will start.

When [WTLC] received the census results this February, we saw that some neighborhoods. . . less than 5 percent black 10 years ago. . . were as much as 20 to 25 percent black [today]. And it was just after this that we began to receive reports of racial harassment in these areas.¹⁰

A Loss of a Sense of Civil Rights History

Jim Taylor related that some of the hate crime committed by individuals comes about because these perpetrators are mostly youths with no understanding of the history of the civil rights struggle in this country. They do not understand the reasons for civil rights laws and affirmative action programs. Without this historical foundation, there is often antipathy towards minorities who are viewed by some as receiving unwarranted privileges.

Taylor recently conducted a seminar with college students who had harassed fellow minority students.

They were not mean kids, they were ignorant of the price that many have paid for their own liberty and justice. . . . When we showed some footage from "Eyes on the Prize" and the history of the civil rights movement. . . they were rapt in attention as to that. They said, "Did this really happen? Is this really what this is about?". It is a sense in which we have another generation now to educate in terms of the importance of civil liberties and civil rights in American society.

Poverty

Phyllis Bartleson linked hate crime to poverty. She argued that poverty has increased and this has led to more hate crime:

I think we are all well aware of the correlation between crime and criminal activity and poverty. Poverty is on the rise in this country. We have more homeless people, we have more people unemployed, and so on. So I think the expectation is probably that we are going to see more [hate] crime.

And when we have people who are out of work, losing their homes, losing their cars and their possessions, they're going to blame someone, and generally that someone is someone who is vulnerable, that is less able to defend themselves, which may be someone who is of another ethnic group, has another sexual orientation, someone that they feel will be defenseless against the attack.¹²

Recent Hate Crime Legislation in Indiana

Amendment to Indiana House Bill 1267

In response to the hate crime problem, an amendment to House Bill 1267 was proposed in the Indiana General Assembly in 1990 by Representative William Crawford. That amendment would have required all law enforcement agencies in the State to track and record all incidences of hate crime. The amendment passed the House of Representatives but failed in the Senate.

Indiana House Bill 1842

In 1991 Representative Crawford introduced a separate piece of hate crime legislation, House Bill 1842. This piece of legislation would have required all prosecutors to report hate crimes to the Indiana State Police. The purpose of the bill was twofold, first, to begin recording such activity and, second, to force local law enforcement agencies to begin recognizing hate crimes. This bill, like House Bill 1267, passed the House but failed in the Senate.¹

Currently there is no State statute or local ordinance in Indiana requiring the collection of data on hate crimes. In addition, there is not even a statutory definition of a hate crime in the Indiana code.

¹ The amendment to House Bill 1267 and House Bill 1842 are in the appendix to this report.

Indiana Law Enforcement Agencies and Hate Crime Reporting

The Indiana State Police and the Indianapolis Police Department had representatives tell the Committee about hate crime reporting and policing. Both departments reported that the level of hate crime in the State was not known and that tracking systems were just beginning to be put into place. In addition, the two representatives of the agencies made the following points.

(1) Currently hate crime is not a separate criminal activity. A hate crime of vandalism, for example, is not treated as a hate crime but only as an act of vandalism.

(2) The national Hate Crimes Statistics Act of 1990 is voluntary. Moreover, it is tied to the Uniform Crime Report, which is also voluntary. Indiana and the city of Indianapolis are participating in the program, but there is only a 30 percent compliance rate statewide with the uniform crime report, which implies that Indiana records of hate crime will be a partial count.

(3) Congress appropriated no additional monies for the implementation of the 1990 Hate Crimes Statistics Act. Individual States and localities bear the entire extra cost of the training and the reporting.

(4) The FBI is currently conducting seminars to train law enforcement officers in recognizing and reporting hate crimes. Officers from Indianapolis have already received this training. Officers from the State police are scheduled to be trained in early 1991.

(5) It will be at least 2 years before the reporting of hate crimes under the 1990 Hate Crimes Statistics Act begins on a full scale by the Indiana State Police.

(6) The Indianapolis Police Department is now tracking hate crime in the city. It will begin reporting hate crimes to the Department of Justice in accordance with the Hate Crime Statistics Act in 1992.

(7) Ultimately, the individual officer at the scene determines if there is hate bias involved in a reported crime. This determination triggers the crime being rendered as a hate crime.

(8) The State police and the Indianapolis police do not specifically track or monitor the activities of hate groups. The agencies do not document people based upon memberships. Implementation of the 1990 Hate Crimes Statistics Act will not change that procedure.

Recommendations to Eliminate Hate Crime

Every presenter made recommendations to the Committee for the elimination of hate crime. These recommendations fell into four categories, and often different speakers voiced their support for several of the recommendations.

The recommendations included:

- (1) recognize, report, and expose hate crime activity,
- (2) train and educate the police and the community in race relations and multicultural awareness,
- (3) insist that national and local political leaders take the lead in decrying acts of bigotry, and
- (4) enact civil and criminal penalties to deter hate crime activity.

Recognize, Report, and Expose Hate Crime Activity

Almost every presenter at the forum expressed a commitment for the 1990 Hate Crimes Statistics Act and for State legislation that would mandate all local law enforcement agencies to track and report hate crimes.¹ Such reporting compels recognition of the existence of hate crime. It was generally felt that only after problems are recognized and exposed can public support be garnered to attack the problem.

Phyllis Bartleson summarized the need for a reporting system:

Various crimes and criminal activities are reported to the various law enforcement agencies across the State, but they are not specifically reported as bias crimes or hate crimes....We have found there are very few crimes that are actually labeled as hate or bias crimes.²

So that seems to be a significant problem within the civil rights arena that it appears when we request statistical information, that we don't have a problem, that these crimes³ do not exist in our communities throughout the State....

Training and Education

Training police departments and educating citizens was the second most frequently mentioned recommendation.⁴ A trained police force not only recognizes a hate crime, but understands how to deal with the crime so that an ugly situation is not made worse. Moreover, such education programs should include sensitivity training on issues of race and race relations.

Former Mayor Hudnut capsulized this recommendation, arguing also that police be carefully recruited and their performance monitored:

We can initiate training programs to help police respond effectively and sensitively to incidents of violence based on bigotry so that police action does not exacerbate a situation or invite additional acts of violence.

We must continue to screen our officers carefully and monitor the performance of our men and women in blue. And if police misconduct is detected, it must be vigorously investigated and prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law.⁶

Robert Epstein emphasized the strong effect that educational programs can have on curtailing bigotry. The ADL has conducted such educational programs in the schools for over a decade and from this experience he told the Committee:

1 Those volunteering support for these ideas included Mayor Hudnut, Representative Crawford, Karen Freeman-Wilson, Phyllis Bartleson, Sam Jones, Robert Epstein, and Arthur Jordan.

4 This recommendation was made to the Committee by Mayor Hudnut, Sam Jones, James Taylor, Robert Epstein, Phyllis Bartleson, and Arthur Jordan.

5 Forum Transcript, p. 14.

6 Forum Transcript, p. 14.

[On] a broader basis, positive educational programs, we find, to be of extreme importance dealing [with and] even in [reducing bigotry], whether it be with young people in the schools or people that have already been more set in their ways that have prejudice built in.

Political Leadership

Several presenters stressed that political leadership is essential to stopping hate crime.⁸ Phil Hoy summarized this point, "If the leadership is not at the top, you are not going to get results anywhere else."⁹

Arthur Jordan repeated this theme in terms of quelling campus violence. He said, "[The] government, the State legislators, must issue a very strong policy with regards to campus racism, spelling out the penalties for violation of this policy."¹⁰

Civil and Criminal Penalties

Another recommendation was that there should be specific civil and criminal penalties for hate crimes. Phyllis Bartleson argued that terror should have a price. Representative Crawford added:

Legislators must understand the necessity of statutorily defining hate crimes, providing penalties for those crimes, or sentence enhancement under existing criminal statutes....Everyone must understand that strong moral leadership that proactively states that those who will act on their bigotry, racism, and sexism, by acts of violence against a person, group of persons, class of persons, or their property, will be swiftly arrested and brought before the bar of justice.

Karen Freeman-Wilson felt that both civil and criminal penalties are necessary. Civil penalties are economic punishments, but because some perpetrators do not have economic resources there is no deterrent in these cases. As a result, civil liabilities need to be buttressed with criminal penalties.

Committee Observations

After reviewing the evidence regarding hate crime in Indiana and examining the transcript of the briefing forum, the Committee makes the following observations.

1. There is an absence of data on the number of hate crimes in Indiana. Further, it is likely that there will not be a significant collection of hate crime data in the near future by either the State police or most local law enforcement agencies. This lack of information restricts study of the issue and also gives the perception that there is no significant hate crime problem in the State.

2. Unless legislation specifically defines, prohibits, and punishes hate crime, such activity will not get the attention it deserves from law enforcement agencies. Specific legislation compels such agencies to devote resources to these crimes.

3. Hate crime is a manifestation of racial hostility. It is also a crime often committed by our youth. Each generation must confront the issue of racism anew. The young generation today has no personal knowledge of the civil rights struggles of the fifties and sixties. Education both in race relations and in the history of this nation's civil rights movement is crucial both to improve present racial harmony among the young and to prepare them to cultivate a better racial climate in the future.

4. The Committee observes a correlation between hate crimes and the political and economic climate of the Nation. The powerful emotion of fear establishes an environment for hate crime to flourish.

Today's political climate shows an increase in racial polarization. The hardships of today's economy have placed many people in vulnerable positions. In this state of vulnerability, it is easy for politics of resentment and divisiveness to manipulate the minds of voters.

Without a demand from the majority of people of goodwill for a national commitment to protect every citizen from violence and personal peril without regard to race, religion, national origin, and sexual preference, the level of bigotry and the number of hate crimes will continue to grow.

 - (C) securities;
 - (D) boats;
 - (E) license plates; and
 - (F) other stolen or recovered property.

(2) All information concerning fugitives charged with a crime, including information concerning extradition.

(3) All information concerning runaways, missing persons, and missing children (as defined in IC 10-1-7-2), including information concerning the release of such persons to the custody of a parent or guardian.

(4) All information concerning offenses motivated by bias and described in IC 35-42-2-1(1)(B), IC 35-43-2-1(a)(3), and IC 35-43-2-2(e).

SECTION 2. IC 5-2-5-13 IS ADDED TO THE INDIANA CODE AS A NEW SECTION TO READ AS FOLLOWS: Sec. 13. (a) In January of each year, the Indiana central repository of criminal history information shall submit an annual report to the:

- (1) governor;
- (2) general assembly; and

4-20-90

(3) attorney general;

which is to provide information under subsection (b) pertaining to offenses motivated by bias and described in IC 35-42-2-1(1)(B), IC 35-43-2-1(a)(3), and IC 35-43-2-2(c).

(b) The annual report must include the following information as reported to the repository during the preceding year:

- (1) The number of arrests.
- (2) The number of charges.
- (3) The number of convictions.

Page 2, after line 4 insert the following:

"SECTION 6. IC 35-42-2-1 IS AMENDED TO READ AS FOLLOWS: Sec. 1. A person who knowingly or intentionally touches another person in a rude, insolent, or angry manner commits battery, a Class B misdemeanor. However, the offense is:

(1) a Class A misdemeanor if:

(A) it results in bodily injury to any other person;

(B) The person commits a battery under this section as the result of the other person's actual or perceived race, color, religion, gender, sexual orientation, physical or mental disability, age, or national origin; or

(C) it is committed against a law enforcement officer or against a person summoned and directed by the officer while the officer is engaged in the execution of his official duty;

(2) a Class D felony if it results in bodily injury to:

(A) a law enforcement officer or a person summoned and directed by a law enforcement officer while the officer is engaged in the execution of his official duty;

(B) a person less than thirteen (13) years of age and is committed by a person at least eighteen (18) years of age;

(C) a person of any age who is mentally or physically disabled and is committed by a person having the care of the mentally or physically disabled person, whether the care is assumed voluntarily or because of a legal obligation;

(D) the other person and the person who commits the battery was previously convicted of a battery in which the victim was the other person;

(E) an endangered adult (as defined by IC 35-46-1-1); or

(F) an employee of the department of correction while the employee is engaged in the execution of the employee's official duty; and

(3) a Class C felony if it results in serious bodily injury to any other person or if it is committed by means of a deadly weapon.

For purposes of this section, a law enforcement officer includes an alcoholic beverage enforcement officer.

SECTION 7. IC 35-45-2-1 IS AMENDED TO READ AS FOLLOWS: Sec. 1. (a) A person who communicates a threat to another person, with the intent that:

(1) the other person engage in conduct against his will; or

(2) the other person be placed in fear of retaliation for a prior lawful act;

or

(3) the other person be placed in fear and the person who communicates the threat does so because of the other person's actual or perceived race, color, religion, gender, sexual orientation, physical or mental disability, age, or natural origin.

commits intimidation, a Class A misdemeanor.

(b) However, the offense is a:

(1) Class D felony if:

(A) the threat is to commit a forcible felony; or

(B) the person to whom the threat is communicated:

(i) is a law enforcement officer;

(ii) is a judge or bailiff of any court; or

(iii) is a witness (or the spouse or child of a witness) in any pending criminal proceeding against the person making the threat;

and

(2) Class C felony if, while committing it, the person draws or uses a deadly weapon.

(c) "Threat" means an expression, by words or action, of an intention to:

(1) unlawfully injure the person threatened or another person, or damage property;

(2) unlawfully subject a person to physical confinement or restraint;

(3) commit a crime;

(4) unlawfully withhold official action, or cause such withholding;

1 (5) knowingly witness testimony or information with respect to an
2 person's legal claim or defense, except for a reasonable claim for witness
3 fees or expenses;

4 (6) expose the person threatened to hatred, contempt, disgrace, or ridicule
5 or

6 (7) falsely harm the credit or business reputation of the person threatened

7 SECTION 8. IC 35-45-2-2 IS AMENDED TO READ AS FOLLOWS: Sec. 2. (a) A person
8 who, with intent to harass, annoy, or alarm another person but with no intent
9 legitimate communication:

10 (1) makes a telephone call, whether or not a conversation ensues;

11 (2) communicates with a person anonymously or otherwise, by telegraph,
12 or other form of written communication; or

13 (3) transmits a false or obscene message, or indecent or profane words,
14 Citizens Radio Service channel;

15 commits harassment, a Class B misdemeanor.

16 (b) A message is obscene if:

17 (1) the average person, applying contemporary community standards, finds that 18 the dominant theme of the message, taken as a whole, appeals to the prurient
19 interest in sex;

20 (2) the message refers to sexual conduct in a patently offensive way; and

21 (3) the message, taken as a whole, lacks serious artistic, literary,
22 political, or scientific value.

23 (c) The offense under subsection (a) is a Class A misdemeanor if the person
24 commits the offense because of the other person's actual or perceived race, color,
25 religion, gender, sexual orientation, physical or mental disability, age,
26 national origin."

HOUSE BILL No. 1842

DIGEST OF INTRODUCED BILL

Citations Affected: IC 5-2-5-14; IC 35-35-3-3; IC 35-38-1.

Synopsis: Hate crimes. Requires prosecutors to report "hate crimes" to the state police department's official repository for criminal history information. Requires the repository for criminal history information to compile this information into an annual report and submit the report in January of each year to the governor, general assembly, and attorney general. Requires certain misdemeanors involving the hatred of a person or group of people be treated in the same manner as felonies for the purpose of making plea agreements, preparing presentence reports, and making a record of a hearing held prior to sentencing. Adds whether or not certain crimes were committed out of hatred of a person or group of people to the list of factors that the court may consider in sentencing. Permits the court to consider evidence of hatred of a person or group of people in the commission of certain crimes as an aggravating circumstance in sentencing and requires the court to state reasons for selecting the sentence imposed in such cases. Expands the information gathered in a presentence report to include information regarding whether hatred for a person or group of persons was evident in the commission of certain crimes.

Effective: July 1, 1991.

February 28, 1991, amended, reported - Do Pass.

HB 1842 — LS 788/01 78

1 an annual report to the following:

- 2 (1) The governor.
 3 (2) The general assembly.
 4 (3) The attorney general.

5 (c) The report submitted under subsection (b) must 6 provide a compilation of information obtained under 7 subsection (a) pertaining to offenses under IC 35-42,
 8 IC 35-43-1, IC 35-43-2, and IC 35-45-2 in which the court
 9 has found that malice aforethought toward a:

- 10 (1) person based on the person's membership in or 11 association with a group or class of persons; or 12 (2) group or class of persons;

13 is evident in the commission of the offense.

14 SECTION 2. IC 35-36-9-3 IS AMENDED TO READ AS 15 FOLLOWS: Sec. 3. (a) This subsection applies to any:

- 16 (1) felony; and
 17 (2) misdemeanor under IC 35-42, IC 35-43-1,
 18 IC 35-43-2, or IC 35-45-2, in which malice
 19 aforethought toward a:

- 20 (A) person based on the person's membership in 21 or association with a group or class of persons;
 22 or
 23 (B) group or class of persons;

24 is evident in the commission of the misdemeanor.

25 No A plea agreement may be made by the prosecuting attorney
 26 to a court on a felony or misdemeanor charge except: (1) only
 27 if the plea agreement is executed in writing and (2) filed
 28 with the court before the defendant enters a plea of guilty. The 29 plea agreement shall be shown as filed, and if its contents
 30 indicate that the prosecuting attorney anticipates that the 31 defendant intends to enter a plea of guilty to a felony or 32 misdemeanor charge, the court shall order the presentence
 33 report required by IC 35-36-1-3 and may hear evidence on the 34 plea agreement.

35 (b) Neither the content of the plea agreement, the 36 presentence report, nor the hearing shall be a part of the official
 37 record of the case unless the court approves the plea agreement.
 38 If the plea agreement is not accepted, the court shall reject it
 39 before the case may be disposed of by trial or by guilty plea. If 40 the court rejects the plea agreement, subsequent plea
 41 agreements may be filed with the court, subject to the same
 42 requirements that this chapter imposes upon the initial plea
 43 agreement.

44 (c) Except as provided in subsection (a), a plea

1 agreement in a misdemeanor case may be submitted orally to the 2 court.

3 (d) In a misdemeanor case, if:

- 4 (1) the court rejects a plea agreement; and
- 5 (2) the prosecuting attorney or the defendant files a
- 6 written motion for change of judge within ten (10) days
- 7 after the plea agreement is rejected

8 the court shall grant the motion for change of judge and transfer 9 the proceeding to a special judge under the Indiana Rules of 10 Criminal Procedure. However, there may not be more than one
11 (1) transfer of the proceeding to a special judge under this 12 subsection.

13 (e) If the court accepts a plea agreement, it shall be bound
14 by its terms.

15 SECTION 3. IC 35-38-1-3 IS AMENDED TO READ AS 16 FOLLOWS: Sec. 3. (a) Before sentencing a person for:

- 17 (1) a felony; or
- 18 (2) a misdemeanor under IC 35-42, IC 35-43-1,
- 19 IC 35-43-2, or IC 35-45-2, in which malice
- 20 aforethought toward a:

- 21 (A) person based on the person's membership in
- 22 or association with a group or class of persons;
- 23 or

24 (B) group or class of persons;

25 is evident in the commission of the misdemeanor;
26 the court must conduct a hearing to consider the facts and 27 circumstances relevant to sentencing. The person is entitled to 28 subpoena and call witnesses and to present information in his 29 own behalf.

30 (b) The court shall make a record of the hearing held 31 under this section, including:

- 32 (1) a transcript of the hearing;
- 33 (2) a copy of the presentence report; and
- 34 (3) if the court finds:
- 35 (A) aggravating circumstances or mitigating
- 36 circumstances; or
- 37 (B) that malice aforethought a:

- 38 (I) person based on the person's membership
- 39 in or association with a group or class of
- 40 persons; or

41 (II) group or class of persons;

42 is evident in the commission of the crime;
43 a statement of the court's reasons for selecting the 44 sentence that it imposes.

1 SECTION 4. IC 35-38-1-7.1, AS ADDED BY P.L.1-1990,
 2 SECTION 346, IS AMENDED TO READ AS FOLLOWS: Sec.
 3 7.1. (a) In determining what sentence to impose for a crime, the 4 court shall consider:

- 5 (1) the risk that the person will commit another crime;
 6 (2) the nature and circumstances of the crime committed;
 7 (3) the person's:
 8 (A) prior criminal record;
 9 (B) character; and
 10 (C) condition;
 11 (4) whether the victim of the crime was less than twelve
 12 (12) years of age or at least sixty-five (65) years of age;
 13 (5) whether the person violated a protective order issued 14 against the person under IC 31-1-11.5 or IC 34-4-5.1; and 15 (6) any oral or written statement made by a victim of the 16 crime; and
 17 (7) if the crime was committed under IC 35-42,
 18 IC 35-43-1, IC 35-43-2, or IC 35-45-2, whether malice
 19 aforethought toward a:

- 20 (A) person based on the person's membership in 21 or association with a group or class of persons;
 22 or
 23 (B) group or class of persons;

24 is evident in the commission of a crime.

25 (b) The court may consider the following factors as 26 aggravating circumstances or as favoring imposing consecutive 27 terms of imprisonment:

- 28 (1) The person has recently violated the conditions of any 29 probation, parole, or pardon granted to the person.
 30 (2) The person has a history of criminal or delinquent
 31 activity.
 32 (3) The person is in need of correctional or rehabilitative
 33 treatment that can best be provided by commitment of the 34 person to a penal facility.
 35 (4) Imposition of a reduced sentence or suspension of the 36 sentence and imposition of probation would depreciate the 37 seriousness of the crime.
 38 (5) The victim of the crime was less than twelve (12) years
 39 of age or at least sixty-five (65) years of age.
 40 (6) The victim of the crime was mentally or physically
 41 infirm.
 42 (7) The person committed a forcible felony while wearing 43 a garment designed to resist the penetration of a bullet.

- (e) and:
 - (A) the crime created an epidemiologically demonstrated risk of transmission of the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) and involved the sex organ of one (1) person and the mouth, anus, or sex organ of another person;
 - (B) the person had knowledge that the person was a carrier of HIV; and
 - (C) the person had received risk counseling as described in subsection (g).
- (9) The person committed an offense related to controlled substances listed in subsection (f) if:
 - (A) the offense involved:
 - (i) the delivery by any person to another person; or
 - (ii) the use by any person on another person; of a contaminated sharp (as defined in IC 16-1-9.7-1) or other paraphernalia that creates an epidemiologically demonstrated risk of transmission of HIV by involving percutaneous contact;
 - (B) the person had knowledge that the person was a carrier of the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV); and
 - (C) the person had received risk counseling as described in subsection (g).
- (10) The offense was committed under IC 35-42, IC 35-43-1, IC 35-43-2, or IC 35-45-2, and malice aforethought toward a:
 - (A) person based on the person's membership in or association with a group or class of persons; or
 - (B) group or class of persons; is evident in the commission of the offense.
- (c) The court may consider the following factors as mitigating circumstances or as favoring suspending the sentence and imposing probation:
 - (1) The crime neither caused nor threatened serious harm to persons or property, or the person did not contemplate that it would do so.
 - (2) The crime was the result of circumstances unlikely to recur.
 - (3) The victim of the crime induced or facilitated the offense.
 - (4) There are substantial grounds tending to excuse or justify the crime, though failing to establish a defense.

- 1 (5) The person acted under strong provocation.
 2 (6) The person has no history of delinquency or criminal
 3 activity, or the person has led a law-abiding life for a
 4 substantial period before commission of the crime.
 5 (7) The person is likely to respond affirmatively to 6 probation or short term imprisonment.
 7 (8) The character and attitudes of the person indicate that 8 the person is unlikely to commit another crime.
 9 (9) The person has made or will make restitution to the 10 victim of the crime for the injury, damage, or loss
 11 sustained.
 12 (10) Imprisonment of the person will result in undue
 13 hardship to the person or the dependents of the person.
 14 (d) The criteria listed in subsections (b) and (c) do not limit
 15 the matters that the court may consider in determining the 16 sentence.
 17 (e) For the purposes of this article, the following crimes are 18 considered sex crimes:
 19 (1) Rape (IC 35-42-4-1).
 20 (2) Criminal deviate conduct (IC 35-42-4-2).
 21 (3) Child molesting (IC 35-42-4-3).
 22 (4) Child seduction (IC 35-42-4-7).
 23 (5) Prostitution (IC 35-45-4-2).
 24 (6) Patronizing a prostitute (IC 35-45-4-3).
 25 (7) Incest (IC 35-46-1-3).
 26 (f) For the purposes of this article, the following crimes are 27 considered offenses related to controlled substances:
 28 (1) Dealing in cocaine or narcotic drug (IC 35-48-4-1).
 29 (2) Dealing in a schedule I, II, or III controlled substance
 30 (IC 35-48-4-2).
 31 (3) Dealing in a schedule IV controlled substance
 32 (IC 35-48-4-3).
 33 (4) Dealing in a schedule V controlled substance
 34 (IC 35-48-4-4).
 35 (5) Possession of cocaine or narcotic drug (IC 35-48-4-6).
 36 (6) Possession of a controlled substance (IC 35-48-4-7).
 37 (7) Dealing in paraphernalia (IC 35-48-4-8.2).
 38 (8) Possession of paraphernalia (IC 35-48-4-8.3).
 39 (9) Offenses relating to registration (IC 35-48-4-14).
 40 (g) For the purposes of this section, a person received risk
 41 counseling if the person had been:
 42 (1) notified in person or in writing that tests have 43 confirmed the presence of antibodies to the human 44 immunodeficiency virus (HIV) in the person's blood; and 45 (2) warned of the behavior that can transmit HIV.

SECTION 6. IC 35-38-1-8 IS AMENDED TO READ AS FOLLOWS: Sec. 8. (a) A defendant convicted of:

- (1) a felony; or
- (2) a misdemeanor under IC 35-42, IC 35-43-1, IC 35-43-2, or IC 35-45-2, in which malice aforethought toward a:

- (A) person based on the person's membership in or association with a group or class of persons;
- or
- (B) group or class of persons;

is evident in the commission of the misdemeanor; may not be sentenced before a written presentence report is prepared by a probation officer and considered by the sentencing court. Delay of sentence until a presentence report is prepared does not constitute an indefinite postponement or suspension of sentence.

(b) A victim present at sentencing in a felony or misdemeanor case shall be advised by the court of a victim's right to make a statement concerning the crime and the sentence.

SECTION 6. IC 35-38-1-9, AS AMENDED BY P.L.36-1990, SECTION 13, IS AMENDED TO READ AS FOLLOWS: Sec. 9.

(a) As used in this chapter, "recommendation" and "victim" have the meanings set out in IC 35-35-3-1.

(b) The presentence investigation consists of the gathering of information with respect to:

- (1) the circumstances attending the commission of the offense;
- (2) the convicted person's history of delinquency or criminality, social history, employment history, family situation, economic status, education, and personal habits; and
- (3) except in cases where the death sentence is sought under IC 35-50-2-8, the impact of the crime upon the victim; and
- (4) if the crime is a crime under IC 35-42, IC 35-43-1, IC 35-43-2, or IC 35-45-2, whether malice aforethought toward a:

- (A) person based on the person's membership in or association with a group or class of persons;
 - or
 - (B) group or class of persons;
- is evident in the commission of the crime.

(c) The presentence investigation may include any matter

1 that the probation officer conducting the investigation believes
2 is relevant to the question of sentence, and must include:

3 (1) any matters the court directs to be included;

4 (2) any written statements submitted to the prosecuting
5 attorney by a victim under IC 35-35-3;

6 (3) any written statements submitted to the probation
7 officer by a victim; and

8 (4) except in cases where the death sentence is sought
9 under IC 35-50-2-9, preparation of the victim impact
10 statement required under section 8.5 of this chapter.

11 (d) If there are no written statements submitted to the 12 probation officer, he shall certify to the court:

13 (1) that he has attempted to contact the victim; and

14 (2) that, if he has contacted the victim he has offered to 15 accept the written statements of the victim, or to reduce 16 his oral statements to writing, concerning the sentence,
17 including the acceptance of any recommendation.

Public Law 101-275
101st Congress

An Act

Apr. 23, 1990
(H.R. 1048)

To provide for the acquisition and publication of data about crimes that manifest prejudice based on certain group characteristics.

Hate Crime
Statistics Act.
28 USC 534 note.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That (a) this Act may be cited as the "Hate Crime Statistics Act".

(b)(1) Under the authority of section 534 of title 28, United States Code, the Attorney General shall acquire data, for the calendar year 1990 and each of the succeeding 4 calendar years, about crimes that manifest evidence of prejudice based on race, religion, sexual orientation, or ethnicity, including where appropriate the crimes of murder, non-negligent manslaughter, forcible rape, aggravated assault, simple assault, intimidation, arson, and destruction, damage or vandalism of property.

(2) The Attorney General shall establish guidelines for the collection of such data including the necessary evidence and criteria that must be present for a finding of manifest prejudice and procedures for carrying out the purposes of this section.

(3) Nothing in this section creates a cause of action or a right to bring an action, including an action based on discrimination due to sexual orientation. As used in this section, the term "sexual orientation" means consensual homosexuality or heterosexuality. This subsection does not limit any existing cause of action or right to bring an action, including any action under the Administrative Procedure Act or the All Writs Act.

(4) Data acquired under this section shall be used only for research or statistical purposes and may not contain any information that may reveal the identity of an individual victim of a crime.

(5) The Attorney General shall publish an annual summary of the data acquired under this section.

(c) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section through fiscal year 1994.

Research and development.

Appropriation authorization.

28 USC 534 note.

Sec. 2. (a) Congress finds that—

(1) the American family life is the foundation of American Society,

(2) Federal policy should encourage the well-being, financial security, and health of the American family,

(3) schools should not de-emphasize the critical value of American family life.

(b) Nothing in this Act shall be construed, nor shall any funds appropriated to carry out the purpose of the Act be used, to promote or encourage homosexuality.

Approved April 23, 1990.
